When automatic transmissions became affordable and reliable in the mid-1950's, they became quite popular. By the 1980's and 90's, automatics became so prevalent that people stopped learning to "drive a stick" during their teen years. Today, manual transmissions are practically an endangered species.

12 Reasons We Should All Drive Manual Cars

A counterintuitive reason that manual transmissions are going slowly but surely extinct is the increasing use of turbochargers in modern cars to improve low-end torque and fuel economy. As fun as driving a manual with a turbo might be, all that low-end grunt is a sure way to increase clutch disc wear and blow gearboxes more frequently.

15 Reasons The Manual Transmission Is Going Away (And Soon)

Not so long ago, it was widely accepted that a true performance car had a manual transmission. In fact, some performance cars were only available with a manual transmission. Well, in the great age that is the 21 st century, things have changed. Now the beloved third pedal is being replaced with paddle shifters attached to the steering wheel and a network of passionless electronics connected to ...

10 Reasons a Manual Transmission is Better than an ...

In the days before electronically-controlled transmissions, the easiest way to get better fuel economy was to opt for a manual transmission. Back then, manuals were the alternative to the Slip-O-Matic power hogs that contemporary automatics were, and even way back in the mid-1970s, manuals had five gears to optimize the engine's torque, rather than the previous three or even two in the case ...

Manual transmissions in modern passenger cars use synchronizers, or synchros, to eliminate the need for double-clutching. A synchro's purpose is to allow the collar and the gear to make frictional contact before the dog teeth make contact. This lets the collar and the gear synchronize their speeds before the teeth need to engage, like this:

I was just wondering does anyone know how to change the settings from automatic to manual, i am using a PS4 controller and have "Gearshift up" set to Y and "Gearshift Down" set to A. For instance I can change the gear by pressing these buttons but it still seems to change automatically, anyone know why, or how to resolve this? I just can't see in the settings where to change this.
