Most people in medieval Europe lived in small rural communities, making their living from the land. Peasant women had many domestic responsibilities, including caring for children, preparing food, and tending livestock. During the busiest times of the year, such as the harvest, women often joined their husbands in the field to bring in the crops.

By 1918, the gap between male and female wages had narrowed, and some women were to be given the vote. The suffrage movement had little success before the war, and the militancy commonly attributed to the Suffragettes had been halted so as not to undermine the war effort. But during the war, the fight for women's suffrage was getting closer.
